1 Hour Without Electricity

On Wednesday, December 15, it is aimed to raise awareness about energy saving by using electricity at a minimum level at any time of the day.

During the 1 hour spent without electricity, books were read, family games were played at home, songs were sung to the accompaniment of instruments, and shadow games were played by turning the lack of electricity into an opportunity. The photos taken during our activities were displayed on our digital board.

Upon a time there was a very kind alien called Vinth. Vinth was a green and blue planet that needed his inhabitants to take care of it. All Vinthians were careful with their beloved planet. All of them knew how to minimize and avoid pollution on their planet. The vinthians were experts in SAVING ELECTRICITY. Their homes and cities were very lit and colourful. And the vinthians needed just a little bit of electricity to lighten them up. But one day, they got an S.O.S. from another planet called Earth. The inhabitants of Earth were confronting pollution, lack of fresh water and lack of enough electricity. They desperately needed the vinthians' help!

They had to help the Earthlings who needed help. If it continues like this, the world will become more polluted; fish and animals would be gone. The Vinthians took action to save Earth from this situation. They came up with an extraordinary idea. The idea was to tell all people about energy saving.

The Vinthians set out for Earth. However, they faced an obstacle. The Earthlings, who did not want to save, wanted to hinder them. These people were content with this state of the Earth and their lives. They had to stop the Vinthians. But the Vinthians had no intention of giving up, they would do their best. They took action, organized campaigns everywhere, tried to raise people's awareness about saving. Finally they succeeded. Earthlings and Vinthians started to use the energy sources in their homes more carefully. Earthlings and Vinthians became friends. However, there was a group of Earthlings who were uncomfortable with this situation. At the head of this group was Norman, who had a record of many crimes.

All Earthlings knew Norman and were terribly afraid of him. He was very uncomfortable with the friendship of the Norman Earthlings and the Vinthians, and he set out to look for something to break the friendship. After much work, Norman came up with an idea. Norman assembles his anti-Austerity group and announces his plan. Norman proclaims everywhere the lie that the Vinthians are trying to seize the Earth's energy resources. They want the Earthlings to save money to avoid depletion of resources. They want the Earthlings to believe this. Learning of this, Elekris... they almost
